

The Benefits of Giving Circles

A Giving Circle is a group of people who combine their donations to fund larger projects, creating the potential to propel significant positive change. This can create a larger impact than donating smaller amounts to several organizations.

ADVANTAGES

- Facilitates strategic philanthropy by focusing on fewer, impactful initiatives.
- Encourages community and collaboration among donors with shared values.
- Maximizes the impact of your contributions.
- Enables deeper investment in selected projects.
- Reduces administrative overhead and improves efficiency.

MAXIMIZE IMPACT

- Identify causes that resonate with your values and goals.
- Research organizations thoroughly to ensure alignment with your priorities.
- Join or start a Giving Circle to pool resources and amplify your influence.
- Engage with the communities you support to see direct outcomes and adjust strategies accordingly.

DOES YOUR CAUSE HAVE A GIVING CIRCLE?

- Research the cause: Check the organization's website, social media pages, and any related forums or community groups.
- Contact the organization: Reach out to the organization directly - they might have information on existing circles or be able to guide you on how to start one.
- Network with like-minded individuals: Connect with others who share your passion for the cause. They might already be part of a Giving Circle or know of one that you can join.
- Utilize online resources: Websites like Philanthropy Together and The Grapevine Giving Circle provide directories and guides on Giving Circles.

SUMMARY

Participating in a Giving Circle can harness the collective power of philanthropy to drive meaningful research and progress. Consider forming or joining a Giving Circle to make the most of your charitable efforts. For further personalized advice, please consult with your wealth management advisor or email us at dtroyer@monetagroup.com.